We Feared This When We Did It.

"FOR SALE—One dozen Plymouth Rock Hens. Seventy cents each, or will sell all for $8.00."

THE FRISCO-MAN is a Frisco book chucked full of Frisco news, winning the hearts of Frisco men.

The editor is a wide-awake Frisco man; a sympathizing friend. His kindness is magnificent, his goodness big, his sympathies eating right into the bottom of our hearts. Not satisfied with giving us so much good reading, he now offers us his book for advertising space. Fearing we would not understand the magnificence of this offer, he illustrates, and what tender chords of sympathy does he not touch. What an understanding of our homely joys, our highest hopes, does he not reveal in this illustration.

"FOR SALE—One dozen Plymouth Rock Hens."

We expected THE FRISCO-MAN to understand and sympathize with us in our efforts to maintain, to advance the high standard of railway science on the Frisco, but that he should follow us to our homely occupation, and give us such thoughtful consideration of our uppermost hopes.

How well does he not know our ambition, for we all raise chickens. Those of us who do not have an ambition to do so. We could not be good Frisco men unless we had this ambition.

We all hope to spend the autumn of our life, when younger and more robust men are running the Frisco, on that well-kept, well-stocked poultry farm so often conceived, yet not yet executed. There, away from the sound of the whistle, the rattle of the rail, we hope to listen to the cackle of the hen as she announces her work is done, and invites us to come gather the harvest.

Then, when life's journey is ended, no tombstone inscription will better announce a life well spent and ambition gratified than this sympathizing example of THE FRISCO-MAN that there yet remains.

"FOR SALE—One dozen Plymouth Rock Hens. Seventy cents each, or will sell all for $8.00."

WE call attention to the advertising space for Frisco employes, regarding which we had an article in the April issue. All employes are invited to send in advertisements under the terms designated.

¶ Our regular rate to others than Frisco employes is three cents a word for each insertion; but as stated, any Frisco employe can insert a 14-word advertisement for two successive months free of charge.

Communications from employes are desired, and upon application to this office addressed envelopes will be furnished for their use.

The "BSCO" Primary Battery

For operating Automatic Block Signals and Crossing Bells and similar uses is an improved form of the Lalande Caustic Soda or Copper Oxide Battery. It is distinguished from the others by the fact that the renewals are assembled in the factory and shipped to you "in the altogether."

To insert a new set of elements it is only necessary to loosen the thumb nut on the suspension bolt. There are no loose parts to be mislaid or lost; there is only one connection per cell, and this can be made in only one way; no parts which have been in the solution are handled or cleaned; internal short circuiting is impossible, while at the same time the internal resistance and liability to freezing have been reduced by placing the elements closer together.

"BSCO" Renewals can be used with all commercial Lalande Cells at a considerable saving in first cost and operating cost.

Write for the "BSCO" Battery Book "FM."
